NOTES

1) The words 'The', 'A', 'An' etc, have been omitted when occurring at the beginning of a title, except when forming part of a locomotive name, when they are inserted at the end of the name, i.e. "Earl, The".

2) The distinction between 'Narrow Gauge' and 'Miniature' railways has been well debated in the past. For the purposes of this index, railways with a track gauge of 15" or less are regarded as 'Miniature' and those with track gauges larger than 15" but less than 56.5" as 'Narrow Gauge'. There are several obvious anomalies, for example the Hudswell-powered 20"/21" seaside lines which clearly should fall in the 'Miniature' camp, but the line has to be drawn somewhere!

3) Each index entry consists of the Issue No. followed by the Page No. (the first page, in the case of articles occupying more than one). The Front Cover is regarded as Page 0; any un-numbered pages ( some rear covers of "Narrow Gauge", for example) are given numbers following on in sequence from the previous numbered page. If an article has several references to or illustrations of a particular locomotive, only the first reference will normally be indexed. Where an issue of "Narrow Gauge" carries two numbers, i.e. 121/122, entries will be listed under the first number only.

4) Letters or matters arising from the publication of articles are indexed under the original article entry; letters on subjects not otherwise indexed are listed under 'Letters'.

5) References to individual locomotives are listed under their name (if carried) and also their Builders Serial No./Year built (if given). Entries indexed under the 'Locomotives' heading refer to text entries only; where a locomotive is mentioned only in a photo caption, it is indexed under 'Illustrations'.

6) Under the classification "Railways - Narrow Gauge", the sub-heading "British Isles" covers the U.K., all Ireland, and the Channel Isles.

7) Individual references to trams or railcars are listed under "Locomotives".

8) Entries under 'Rolling Stock' are not made for casual passing references to coaches etc in the course of an article, but are restricted to instances where they are the principal subject matter, or where extended reference is made.

9) Articles are primarily indexed under their actual title as printed in the magazine (omitting 'A', 'The', etc). In many cases this gives no indication of the actual subject matter, so a second listing - 'Articles - Subject' is provided to simplify use of the Index. The 'Subject' listing gives only the first magazine entry reference; any subsequent matters arising can be traced by reference to the Title listing. 'Subject' entries are not made for those articles whose contents are obvious from their title.

The compiler would appreciate advice of any significant errors or omissions discovered by members.
